The Canadian Network for International Surgery (CNIS) trains midwives, nurses and doctors, as well as medical and clinical officers, to bring life-saving surgical and emergency obstetrical training to Africans, preventing suffering and the deaths of millions of people each year. Over the past 16 years, CNIS and its partners have trained close to 20,000 healthcare practitioners and certified nearly 600 surgical, obstetrical and nursing instructors in eight African countries, as well as in Guyana and Haiti. With your help, we can reach even further. www.cnis.ca
